Fly Me To The Moon
Call Me Irresponsible

That's All

RELAX NICK NOBLE

The ingredients of an enjoyable album are basically simple: good songs performed well. We think that the ingredients in this particular album fit the requirements just fine.

■ The songs? Simply a selection of tasty standards—with a couple of surprises. "When Autumn Calls" and the title song, "Relax," are fine ballads which are destined to join the ranks of favorite standards. ■ The singer? A young man with a big, pleasant voice who has had notable success in records, night clubs, and TV. The record successes include "The Bible Tells Me So," a large hit of a few seasons back, and "Moonlight Swim"; the night club engagements include the Chez Paree in Chicago, the New Frontier in Las Vegas, and many other top spots; the TV guest spots include the Ed Sullivan and Dick Clark shows.

■ The theme of the album is stated fully in the title: "Relax." There is nothing here which is wild or frantic; all the songs are for shoes-off, lean-back listening. Why not do just that?
